‘Turmoil’ is designed to bring attention to mental health issues in the years of COVID-19. Over the past two years, we have been apart from friends and family due to the pandemic. Mental health is a growing concern for all of us. This sculpture comes in two parts but is tied together by leather, representing what we do to keep our lives under control in these trying times. Some of us are successful, and some are not. We all wish we could go back to normal (pre-COVID); unfortunately, we will never go back. We can only keep moving forward to beat the pandemic and bring our lives back together as they should be.

Completely hand carved using traditional tools.

This year the Royal Canadian Mint created a coin called Make it matter, which is attached to the back of this sculpture.
